Believe Area Youth Killed in Alaska Climbing

BY ELIZABETH ALANNE

Stephen Taylor of Mount Prospect, one of seven members of a mountain climbing party missing for three days on Alaska's Mount McKinley, is now feared dead.

The 22-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Y. Taylor, 207 Go Wanda, joined 11 other young men in a 40-day expedition to make the 20,770-foot mountain, the highest peak in North America, on June 18.

Taylor's father said that Mount McKinley park rangers reported the climbers had been separated during their descent when 150 m.p.h. winds literally blew them from the sides of the mountain.

A body found Saturday at the group's base camp, 17,900 feet up the mountainside, has been tentatively identified as his son's, he said.

MEMBERS OF the rescue party assumed that the young man was able to make his way back to the base camp after being separated from his companions and got into his sleeping bag for protection, said Taylor.

A park ranger said death was probably due to altitude sickness and exposure to the elements.

An experienced mountain climber, Taylor, 20, was a member of the party, which included Joe Wilson of Provo, Utah, Howard Taylor, Paul Schiffer and Jerry Lewis, all of Boulder, Colo., and Aubert Schiff of Lafayette, Ind. Schiff did not reach the summit because of altitude sickness. The other men preceded Taylor's group to the mountain.

Rescue teams, continuing the search for the seven missing climbers found the body identified as Taylor's on Saturday. Three other bodies, all unidentified, were found Sunday.

The search for the remaining three climbers is continuing.

MEMBERS of Taylor's group also included: Jerry Clark, Mark McLaughlin and John Smith, all of Eugene, Ore.; Hank Jones, Portland, Ore.; Dennis Luchterhand, Scarsdale, N.Y.; and Walter Taylor, Lafayette, Ind.

"We've talked to the rangers and we don't get much encouragement," said Taylor. "If the body they found is Stephen's, and they think it is, we are going to have difficulty getting him back."

"The rangers said the winds were terrible and made searching difficult for the rescue party. Right now they have to concentrate on finding the three who are still missing," he said.

Taylor graduated from Brigham Young University in Salt Lake City in June and had been planning the Mount McKinley climb for six months.

3 Groups Endorse Referendum

Three Arlington Heights homeowners associations have endorsed the "part district" Aug. 5 referendum. The Arlington Vista Homeowners Association, the Forest View Improvement Association and the Sunny Ridge Homeowners Association, have urged approval of the $2.4 million proposal. Richard Becker, president of the Sunny Ridge Association, called the issue "another step in keeping Arlington Heights as the finest community in the Chicago area."

BON VOLLMAN, president of the Forest View Association, said, "Our division has been well served, and the park officials seem to have made adequate plans to meet the needs of all other areas in the community."

According to park district estimates, the referendum would raise 1968 taxes by about $15 on a $100,000 home but the tax rate is expected to decrease as the tax base increases.

The Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce and the Youth Commission have previously endorsed the referendum.

Sanitary District Issues Flood-Plain Ultimatum

Threatening to refuse all sewer permits, the Metropolitan Sanitary District has forced quick action on flood plain control by Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Rolling Meadows.

Vinton W. Bacon, superintendent of the district, has issued an ultimatum to all village members of the district: Adopt a uniform flood plain ordinance with prescribed restrictions by Sept. 1, or sewer permits will be withheld indefinitely.

HE HAS also asked the Cook County board to consider a new set of flood-plain regulations covering undeveloped parts of the county under the same conditions.

Arlington Heights has already completed the draft of an ordinance following the requirements of the district and is under consideration by the village attorney.

But, Charles Trow, village engineer, said, "We are operating just the same right now. We have local regulations."

Arlington Heights is also expecting by the beginning of September a detailed report on the flood flooding.

MOUNT PROSPECT does not have an ordinance but is in the process of writing one.

Bernard Hammer, village engineer, said the village board will have plenty of time to decide on the proposed ordinance.

Rolling Meadows has some provision for flood plain areas, according to R. D. Henderson, city controller.

In a meeting of the Building and Zoning committee of the City Council last night, Henderson notified the members of Bacon's request.

IT WAS agreed that the flood-plain ordinance adopted in 1963 should be submitted to the sanitary district.

"If he (Bacon) doesn't agree, I will have to come up with something else," Henderson said.

FLOOD-PLAINS and flood hazard areas are specified on a map prepared by the U. S. Geological survey and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

Areas prone to flooding during heavy rainfall are called flood plains.

The new district policy proposed by a committee and approved by the board of trustees, places the following restrictions:

Building in flood areas will not be allowed where the flood level exceeds the highest flood level recorded there and no portion of the building shall be less than two feet above the same elevation.

of other children in her neighborhood. Cheryl Hill subdivision area near Mount Prospect.

"I don't think it would hurt if the speed limit were reduced to 40 miles an hour," said Mrs. Anton.

"THE SIGN says 'rough road' but it doesn't say anything about Euclid becoming a race track after the railroad tracks. Euclid is absolutely a race track the way they drive. They never slow down," she said.

Mrs. Anton said she tried to contact state and county officials three years ago but "they gave me the run-around," she said.

SHE SAID sidewalks on Euclid would be an answer also for the children who are on the road to go to school. She said a park is planned at Euclid and Wolf by the River Trail Park Foundation.

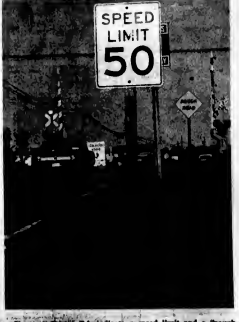

It is complete the need for sidewalks and a reduced speed limit will be more urgent.

Mrs. Anton said she believed the homeowners in her subdivision "would be glad to contribute $50 to a sidewalk project for the protection of their children."

"SOMEONE SHOULD put in sidewalks for the children. They don't walk and they don't run and they don't play on the street. It's not only teenagers, but adults as well who speed in the area," she said.

The mother said she would be willing to contribute the necessary portion to start a sidewalk project if necessary. She said her neighbors feel the same way about the protection of their children.

The Cook County Police and the fire department have given as quick help when we need it. Now I don't know where to start," she said.

'What Proposal?' Asks Meadows

If Tech Associates has made a proposal to city officials in Rolling Meadows, the officials don't know about it.

Adelman Edward Early, "No comment," said Adelman Edward Early.

It has been rumored that the building firm has approached the city officials with a proposal to construct a 12-acre parcel east of Wilke Rd.

THE TRACT has received multi-family structures zoning from the Cook County Board of Commissioners. The zoning has been presented by the Village of Arlington Heights.

If the plan of the village does not fall on deaf ears, the builders may seek admission to the city of Rolling Meadows for the high rise development.

"NO ONE HAS contacted me," said D.W. Hensinger, city controller.

"I don't know a thing about it," said Donald Rose, village attorney.

"What experiment," asked alderman Rudolph Baier, chairman of the Building and Zoning Committee of the city council.

only hallways and stairwells are the major problem left.

BOARD MEMBERS said they were impressed with the high degree of "one-building" effort and the contractors have achieved at South. The original structure was built, but Chicagoan recalled, in 1925. Meadows Building Permits May Climb to Area High Building permit fees in Arlington Heights may rise as high as the City Council approved the increase proposed by the Building and Zoning Committee.

The committee's recommendation to the building code is expected to be ready for a final reading Tuesday and to become effective by Sept. 1.

Members of the committee, Rudolf Reich, chairman, and Donald G. Wren and Edward P. Barker, met Tuesday with R.D. Heston, city engineer, and William Lettier, building and zoning officer, to discuss the changes.

"I recommend we make the changes as shown to offset the increasing time and money spent to run our building department," Barker said in a memo to the committee.

"In past years, the builder has raised his prices to approximately double the cost of the materials and the salaries of our personnel, and I feel we should offset these increases accordingly," he said.

Presently, a $2 fee is charged for examination of plans for new construction, and additions of accessory building for residential purposes.

The proposed increase for the new construction is $15 for additions to buildings other than residential, and $10 for additions to residential buildings.

A comparison of rates demonstrates that the city would lead the area in building permit fees if the code is amended by the city council.

For a $30,000 residential, one-story home with a basement and attached garage, the present fees are: Mount Prospect, $126; Arlington Heights, $107; Elk Grove Village, $90; Palatine, $75; Rolling Meadows, $127.50. The new rates would increase the fee to $167.50 in Rolling Meadows.

For a $45,000 residential home with two stories and a basement, the present fees are: Mount Prospect, $170; Arlington Heights, $127; Elk Grove Village, $135; Palatine, $120; and Rolling Meadows, $172.50. The proposed fee is $210.

What is Paris predicting for fall? Hemline reports from all over the world have been compared to a "schizophrenic" happening, with hems going up and down the way an elevator does when a child plays with the controls.

At Dior, head designer Marc Bohan says his latest motif is "femininity at all costs, plus a great diversity." Length of skirt? "Well, this will depend entirely on the function of the dress. But the straight skirt is definitely replaced by a graceful, swinging line."

Gerard Pipart for Nina Ricci has worked on three principal lengths for skirts—longer than mini-definitely underlined waistline and muted colors. Daytime skirts will be the knee, sports skirts will have longer hems in the good old British tradition and all lengths will turn up for evening.

OTHER reports from Paris indicate summer is the time for lot of exercise—because the waistline is coming back in the fall. Tents are being folded and the alibout for fall will be more wasp-shaped and completely feminine.

Natural shoulders, belts, long sleeves, covered knees, fancy hose and slimmer heels still the rest of the story. The new shape may settle the use of Twiggy figures. The mannequins selected by the countries are the outdoor type rather than slender waists.

MICHAEL GOMA, who designs for Jean Paulin is on the longer-than-mini side of the fence. "Knees will vanish and I suggest different lengths for different occasions," he says. His daytime dresses will be functional and easy-going with "lots of room for everything. Hosiery will be everything. Hosiery will be everything. Hosiery will be everything."

harmonize with the ensemble. It will show a lot of black rich brown and white.

Blouses, soft flatters and feminine, will replace the twin waist set which has become a sort of uniform for so many women. Fall looks like the feminine figure has won again. The relaxed suit used for balancing may finally be in vogue. It is the last line of the "beaute of the bulge" again.

THE WORKS were done by students in the Countryside Center's summer classes. The classes will end with an exhibit for parents at Pioneer Park, Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m. before the works are moved to the hospital.

The exhibit at the hospital will be the first of its kind by a Countryside class for youngsters. Instructor for the summer classes was Judith McKenney.

ALSO this month, a Founders' show will be exhibited at the Arlington Theatre. The show will include the art works of Ruth Cooney, Lois Weisler, Lois Hodges, Martha Allen, Sue Schell, Alice Zahner, Edie Wagner, Jeanne Althaus, and Elaine Syrenco.

They are the area residents from the original group that founded the Countryside Art Center in 1953.

Better ways of coping with the information explosion will soon be studied in a $472,165 research program at the University of Illinois at Urbana, according to the U.S. Office of Education.

The four projects which make up the program are financed by authority of the Higher Education Act of 1965. They form part of the 16-project scheme costing $3.5 million, called the Library and Information Sciences Research Program, which is being undertaken by educational institutions, state, and organizations in 19 States and the District of Columbia.

Specific subjects of the four projects have not been announced.

The information boom and greatly expanded use of the library of all types have placed a demand on the nation's library and information resources that can no longer be met efficiently with present methods and facilities. The body of scientific literature in particular is doubling in size every eight to 10 years.

An important part of the overall picture that will call for attention from the nation's librarians will be the tremendous growth of the library of all types as well as the expansion of public library facilities in northwest suburban communities.

Steps have already been taken in other areas such as Maryland and Michigan to explore new library power needs and set up methods of selection, control, training, and utilization of personnel to satisfy the information needs of the information centers and libraries and to meet the needs of providing maximum library services to rapidly expanding metropolitan areas.

DOCTOR SAYS

Petit Mal

W. C. BRANSTADT, M.D.

Q—What is petit mal? What causes it? Is there any cure?

A—A petit mal attack is a momentary blackout associated with the milder form of epilepsy. In the typical focal or grand mal attack the victim utters a cry, loses consciousness, and froths at the mouth and convulses. After either type of seizure the victim has no recollection of what went on during the spell. The cause is unknown but heredity is believed to be a factor.

In different persons various precipitating factors have been observed, such as excitement, fatigue, watching television, the sight of a flash light, noise, moonlight music or sudden changes in temperature.

CAPTAIN EASY

THE VILLETS

No Answers to Legion Baseball Riddle

BY DALE HOFMANN

The ball game had been over for a good five minutes and the hard core of Arlington's American Legion baseball following was still trying halfheartedly to pick itself from the stands and head for home.

PEOPLE who barely knew each other in the past made acquaintances now if not good friends after a session of rooting for their team together. The question before the house was why, and no one wanted to wait until tomorrow to find out, so they came up with an answer that would make a 142-balling just a little easier to swallow.

"I JUST DON'T UNDERSTAND it," he said. "This team had as much talent as any I have ever seen, but they didn't really play. THE ILLINOIS REPORT

Phony Postcards, Not Funny To Page

By United Press International

SPRINGFIELD — State Superintendent of Public Instruction Ray Page told postal authorities some was using his name in circulating phony postcards.

Page asked the postal authorities to investigate the matter.

Page said the handwritten cards, bearing his name for a return address, say:

"I am a teacher at school records has disclosed that you failed to complete kindergarten. We must, therefore, call to your attention municipal regulations 25-238-11."

Investigation was completed by every resident of this community. The Department of Public Safety is now processing the matter. The Department of Public Safety is now processing the matter.

Page said his office had received many telephone calls from persons who said they had received the false message.

Warrants Issued For Motorcyclists

A traffic court judge yesterday issued warrants for the arrest of 10 downtown motorcyclists who failed to appear for scheduled trial.

The youths, from Chicago, Springfield, Randolph and St. Joseph, were charged with disorderly conduct and obstructing traffic as the result of an incident on the south two weeks ago.

The motorcyclists, wearing metal helmets and carrying throat-cut chains, were issued of forcing a bus to carry an expensive lane.

Oh, Shucks

Ever since artist Pablo Picasso offered to donate a statue for Chicago's Civic Center Plaza, the undisciplined school-seeker structure has come under attack.

City officials and critics have criticized the structure as "monstrous" and some ungrateful expression.

Tuesday an anonymous letter implored police and said the sculpture would be "more up within an hour, it will there."

Slate Merit Exams

A special series of state merit examinations will be held Aug. 25 and 26.

Mayor Martin, director of the Illinois Department of Public Safety, said persons with training and experience in any of the listed areas may apply to the Department of Public Safety, 508 Chestnut Building, Springfield, before Aug. 15.

Examinations will be given on an open competitive and competitive promotional basis for: administrative assistant (10 positions); mail carrier (10 positions); mail carrier supervisor; mail carrier technician; mail carrier supervisor; mail carrier technician; mail carrier supervisor; mail carrier technician.

"The successful referees in 1963 and 1964 provided 139,000 and 144,000 in funds respectively."

Lynd Sues Chicago State

SPRINGFIELD — Lynd, the former Yale professor whose pacifist views have embroiled him in controversy, has filed a suit to force the Illinois Board of Governors of colleges and universities to give him a job.

Chicago lawyer Gilbert A. Lindsey said Lynd, 47, yesterday asked the Sangamon County Circuit Court to issue a writ of mandamus ordering the board to hire Lynd.

On July 16 the board voted, 8-1, against approving Lynd for a job as history professor at Chicago State College.

Lynd said he had been guaranteed the job by Chicago State President Milton Byrd.

In refusing to approve Lynd's application, the board conceded he was qualified as a scholar and teacher of history," but objected to his political views.

"I will suffer irreparable damage if I'm not allowed to teach (at Chicago State)," Lynd said. "This right to teach is a fundamental, constitutional right."

He said he was suing the board "as a scholar and teacher of history."

Mrs. Allen told police she would like the rabbit at her home until it was skinned.

The bill was introduced by Ramsey and is now before the village board.

The bill would require the village board to hold a referendum on the issue of whether or not to build a new park.

"The successful referees in 1963 and 1964 provided 139,000 and 144,000 in funds respectively."

This was won't for real. Members of the Arlington Heights Fire Department used an empty lawn on Oakton St. for a practice session Monday. Later in the afternoon they were called to extinguish a small brush fire on Cedar and Weymouth.

Tollway Commission Report Accepts Area Advice Here

All five suggestions from the local tollway commission relating to the Tollway Commission's current feasibility study regarding an interchange at Arlington Heights Rd. and the Illinois Tollway have been approved and adopted by the tollway commission.

Donald R. Bonnell, chairman of the tollway commission, said yesterday that additional points suggested for inclusion in the commission's study were adopted at last Friday meeting.

Carl Mees, chairman of the local tollway commission, had sent a letter to the committee in July outlining the suggestions.

The local committee has been invited to observe the Tollway Commission personnel doing parts of the feasibility study, Bonnell said.

Members of the tollway commission said they were not sure if the tollway commission would accept the suggestions.

The park district's $2.4 million proposal may be one of the best organized referendums ever brought before the voters of Arlington Heights.

In the span of about 32 days, a citizens committee was organized, briefed on the district's problems and plans and has since prepared all kinds of promotional material.

Chairman of the committee is Dick Ferrie of 1305 Plymouth Court.

A FANCY brochure was expected to be distributed to Arlington Heights residents today.

The park administration says lack of publicity was one of the major reasons the October referendum was defeated last year.

It is obvious efforts have been made not to repeat that mistake in the Aug. 5 referendum.

The citizens committee first tackled two problems that have been thorns in the side of the referendum. Two sub-committees were formed in an attempt to resolve the overpass question and the demands of some residents who were not satisfied with the recreational facilities in their area.

A PUBLICITY committee formed at the same time, under the chairmanship of Guy Anderson of 8602 N. Kenosha, held 12 meetings while the committee-of-the-whole had five more meetings.

Public absence voting, the park administration so far has received 45 absentee ballots. The highest number of such votes received in any previous referendum was 10.

Almost 20 other functions were organized or scheduled to take place this week. They included meetings with local organizations and presentations of the referendum to neighborhood and civic associations.

TWO KIDNIE marches were featured during the week: Kids weekend and loudspeaker trucks Friday and Saturday will urge to voters to go to the polls.

They would ask it is Chicago's Democratic machinery at work," said Park Commissioner Joseph Bywater.

The committee last week was thinking in terms of where its power is and where it should place greater emphasis in the remaining days of the campaign.

A group of block campaigns have been organized in many neighborhoods, but it was figured out the greatest campaign gap would be in the center of the village. City north Arlington Heights Rd.

THOSE PEOPLE will be reached through loudspeakers from cruising cars.

The effort is to get the feasible vote out.

"The minority 'no' vote will come out," was surmised to guide voters to the polls.

Cy rides and baby-sitters will be provided for those who have difficulty reaching the polling places.

"The final attempt to win voters will be made to the polls."

A TELEPHONE bank will be set up at the North Arlington Heights station Thursday and Friday morning while a sandwich board will urge "Vote Yes."

When the Living Is Easy

By Catherine O'Donnell

This is the time of the year when the summertime cry living rouses a peak. The stories that summer down sometimes contain a little more that make them all sound like fish stories.

Constant traveler, a resident of Arlington Heights, checked into one of New York City's better hotels. He was best for a small cluster of exquisites. The next morning he checked out. He took out his check book, ready to write a big one to pay the bill.

The hotel cashier looked apologetically at him as he handed him the bill rolled in his. "Are you sure you were only here for one night?" she asked. "That's all," said the cashier. "You were here for one night and you were here for one night."

At Sudak's started to change the tire, it was a real adventure when the trailer tire blew out. It was a tire that had to be changed in a hurry because the giant fish was gradually being deflated.

As Sudak started to change the tire, it was a real adventure when the trailer tire blew out. It was a tire that had to be changed in a hurry because the giant fish was gradually being deflated.

When Richard Sokoloff of S. Donald pulled his wife, Dottie, to his five children, Laurie, 11 and Bobby, 4, into the car along with the Ch-Chu-Chu, the French poodle with the Spanish name, he had no idea that he was entering into a period of personal fun.

Attached to the car was the best trailer carrying the family fun items, a good-sized outboard motor boat.

They drove to Chipewauk Flamingo on Coney Island, Wisconsin. Sokoloff, who is a sometime fisherman, went fishing with his son, Rick. He used a Minkie fishing rod attached to a Neppa Glim Killer with a number-five hook from France. The latter is known in new-fish circles as a lure.

The lure was just right enough for the senior Sokoloff to catch a 26-pound fish.

music with a 22 inch girth. It was 47 official inches. It was the sensation of the season at Hayward where it was measured. The shoe was left there to be mounded. It was just too great to be a fish story without proof for posterity.

The eating part of the fish started Dottie making out a guest list for a fish party for friends and relatives that will take place this Friday at her home.

Tuesday night, a Chicago radio station braggart for Mr. Sokoloff. The sportsman of the air announced that it was the third largest fish water fish that had ever been caught in the United States.

The 10-hour ride home with the eating part of the fish turned into a real adventure when the trailer tire blew out. It was a tire that had to be changed in a hurry because the giant fish was gradually being deflated.

Ronnie's father is Village Trustee George Burlingame, who pilots a jet for National Airlines. He fully agreed to let his son go by train.

Ronnie, who grew up with his airplane, father, got over how long it took him to get to a short distance. He took a plane the next time, he said.

Another kind of power. And then there was the ranch-hand job with her feet walking down Campbell wearing a green button that proclaimed in white letters, "HUSH POWER."

Pick Right Spot For Tent

Type that can save your life on your camping trip this year are just three simple rules to observe before you pitch your tent.

Do not locate under dead trees, where heavy branches might crash down on you. Avoid tenting too close to rocky cliffs or bluffs where sudden rock-slides can cause disaster.

And always find out the higher water mark along a river bank or similar stream, then bend down above it, thus reducing danger from a flood.

Just One of Summer Services

Velocity Mail, Delivery in Reverse

Summer does pose problems for the Arlington Heights Post Office. Take the matter of the family leaving for a summer vacation. The family advises the post office that there will be no one at the address to take the mail. The post office thanks the patron for the thoughtfulness of making a call. The mail is held at the post office until the family returns. It all seems like a simple and almost effortless service on the part of the post office. At least it seems so to the individual family.

If there were but one family taking a vacation trip and asking for the "hold my mail" service, it would be almost perfect. The matter takes on a high degree of complexity when not dozens, not scores, but hundreds of families decide to go on vacation and close their homes at the same time. This week, for instance, there are more than 400 families out of town with their mail being held by the post office.

The accumulation of mail per family varies from a few letters that could be held in the hand to bundles of mail large enough to fill several large baskets. At peak time, 500 to 600 families can be out of town at the same time with their mail on "hold." Finding the space in an already crowded post office to store this volume of mail is an orderly manner takes even if it is.

Even if the family forgets to advise the post office of the closing of the home during a vacation trip, the post office attempts to give the "hold" service anyway. As soon as mail fills the home mailbox, it is obvious that no one is at home to receive mail, the carrier puts his service in reverse and picks up the mail, and returns it to the post office for safe keeping. The carrier leaves a note in the mail box for the family. The note advises the family that the mail is being held at the post office and requests that the family call for the mail after which regular carrier service will be resumed.

BUT the post office service extends even further. Any package or parcel post mail is not handled by the mail carrier who calls at the home six days each week. Parcel post is handled by a different carrier who cannot leave the package until the mail carrier returns.

The regular carrier observes a package has been delivered. He again reviews his service, picks up the package and places it with the other "hold" mail at the post office until the family returns.

"We are in a business that is completely unique," says Alvin Kech, assistant superintendent of mail delivery at the Arlington Heights Post Office. "We are perhaps the only business that is a personal touch with every family and business in town six days a week. We cannot refuse a customer. We don't say 'No.' We just take what comes when it comes and handle it as best we can."

Incidentally, the post office looks for favor on families leaving for a vacation arranging with a neighbor to collect and hold the mail. As a useful thing an arrangement is made anyway with someone to visit the house every day or two.

SUMMER ALSO brings to the post office internal vacation problems. While vacations can be taken by the nearly 250 members of the Arlington Heights Post Office staff throughout the year, a majority of the staff prefer to take vacations during the summer.

To meet the situation the Arlington Heights Post Office has approximately 20 college students during the summer. The students are paid well, getting $12.44 an hour. They are supervised by the post office staff. The students are paid well, getting $12.44 an hour. They are supervised by the post office staff. The students are paid well, getting $12.44 an hour. Tangy, Gourmet Flair For Summer Salads

BY MARILYN HELPERS

Add a gourmet flair to your summer salads with a tangy blue cheese dressing. To save time, keep a wedge of American blue cheese already crumbled in a covered jar in the refrigerator and sprinkle it on your salads.

Here are three popular blue cheese dressings that you can make in a matter of minutes.

EASY BLUE CHEESE DRESSING
1 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons vinegar
1/4 cup crumbled American blue cheese
Dash of salt and pepper
Combine the ingredients and chill until ready to use.

LOW CALORIE SALAD DRESSING
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup French dressing
1/2 cup crumbled American blue cheese
Dash dry mustard
Mix mayonnaise, French dressing and mustard together thoroughly. Lightly stir in crumbled blue cheese so the pieces are distributed through the dressing.

Blueberry Dressing
Blend 1/2 cup of the cheese with the blueberry. Pour over slices or wedges of lettuce.

or your favorite tossed salad. Sprinkle with pepper and end the rest of the blue cheese.

Yeast Rolls Child Can Make

Even a child can do it—make homemade yeast rolls. Not only one, but two junior cooks set to work in our kitchen to prepare yeast rolls as a surprise for Dad. The kitchen does just a little messy when the younger cooks take over, but it's all part of the fun. They measured, poured, stirred and kneaded their dough. By the time their interest started to decline, the dough was ready for the refrigerator. Here it could remain for several days and be used for several days.

About an hour before dinner, the cooks shaped the dough into rolls and let them raise before popping them into the oven. It was hard to tell who was more pleased with the piping hot rolls. Dad or the cooks, but here we're not any left over.

THE RECIPE for Refrigerator Rolls was supplied by the 4-H Cooperative Extension Service. Nearly a half million 4-H members in all 50 states are enrolled in the national 4-H Bread program.

REFRIGERATOR ROLLS
1 cup hot water
1/2 cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons margarine
1 cup warm water (105-115 degrees F.)

2 packages of cake yeast, active dry or compressed
1 egg beaten
5-6 cups unsifted flour (about)
Mix together hot water, sugar, salt and margarine. Cook to lukewarm. Measure warm water into large warm bowl. Sprinkle or crumble in yeast; stir until dissolved. Stir in lukewarm water mixture; egg and half the flour; beat until smooth. Stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board and knead until smooth and elastic, about 10 minutes. Place dough in greased bowl, turning to coat. Cover tightly with waxed paper or aluminum foil.

Place in refrigerator until dough is in bulk, or until needed. Dough may be kept 4-5 days in refrigerator (about 40-45 degrees F.).

TO MAKE pan rolls, divide dough into thirds. From each third, form 9 smooth balls of equal size (27 balls total). Place in greased, 8-inch round cake pan; cover, let rise in warm place free from draft until doubled in bulk (about 30 minutes). Brush lightly with melted margarine. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 15-20 minutes. You may use this same basic dough for other roll shapes.

Lost Children, Car Keys and Autos Are Routine For Randhurst Police

BY MAXINE TYMA
You're a ranger, mister. You're not really a policeman, are you?" asked a three-year-old boy.

The Randhurst Security Policemen union, for he had heard a question several times before.

THE POLICE in the shopping center perform a number of duties not necessarily related to the little "policemen". They are assigned to give 24-hour protection to the mall area in the Mount Prospect shopping center. "They are here to protect our property and our shoppers," said Paul Dasso, assistant to the general manager of the Randhurst Corporation. "ABOUT 90 per cent of their job is just plain public relations. The work in the mall is to assist shoppers and also work in the parking lot," Dasso said.

A lost child in Mount Prospect's Randhurst Shopping Center told Cpl. James Monson he needs help. David Ellison, 4, of Deerfield, is only one of the minor problems the police help to solve.

reported then. Sometimes the figure is 100 children a month reported lost in the center. "We haven't really 'lost' one yet," Dasso said.

In lost-child incidents the policeman usually will find the child wandering around alone, sometimes crying, in the mall. He will take the youngster to the Randhurst Corp. office and page the child's mother. Sometimes the mother will report the loss and the policeman will look for the child.

"WOMEN ARE always losing their car or locking keys in the car," said Cpl. Edwin Monson of the security police.

"Most of the time the cars are not really stolen, they are just misplaced," he said. The policeman said often the shoppers forget the exact spot in the 7,000-space parking lot. They report the car to be stolen and the policeman has to look for it.

Monson and the other staff of the Randhurst Corporation and have been active since the shopping center opened five years ago. "We want them to be conspicuous on the mall so the shoppers know they are there to assist and protect them," Dasso said.

AFTER REGULAR shopping hours, the police are on duty inside and outside, watching the building. During the night, a man patrols the area with a German shepherd dog. During the day, the Randhurst Security Police patrol the parking lot areas to assist shoppers and to act as a deterrent to persons parking with cars.

Space Race for 2nd Home Site

A second home may soon be as popular as having a second car - if you can find a place to put it.

The trend toward second, or vacation homes as they are sometimes called, has grown phenomenally in recent years. Today there are 1,410,000 second homes in the United States, and this figure is expected to grow to 2,000,000 by 1970.

The spectacular rate of this increase is 125,000 homes per year, and in the last 10 year period the number has grown by over 50 per cent. And the designers of second homes have outdone themselves with literally thousands of plans for picturesque residences for vacation or year-round use. Amid all this activity, however, many people have overlooked the most important fact: land cannot be stretched. Many buyers are chagrined to discover that the amount of land available for their homes is almost non-existent in some areas - although second home buyers are increasing, the amount of land on earth hasn't increased since time began. The fact that there is only so much land is making second-home buyers compete more vigorously for choice property.

HARVEY W. Branigar, Jr., president of the Branigar Organization, Inc., a 50-year old midwest land development firm, predicts that the second-home market will set a rush for property much like the postwar explosion to the suburbs. "Only this time, all the land that's wanted may not be available," Branigar stated, "because many of the best homesites are being bought today for future second homes."

One of the Branigar Organization's most recent second-home site developments is 2350 acres large, a 4½ mile long, spring-fed lake surrounded by picturesque homesite property. The landscape is a combination of western canyons and northwoods scenery, with evergreens, sandy beaches and craggy bluffs side by side. The development, called Lake Redstone, is located near LaVale, Wisconsin, not far from the Wisconsin Dells. "We sold so many homesites last year," Branigar said, "that we had to open up the final sections this season."

The sight of trees like elm, oak, spruce, firwood, and various pines together on the same landscape is quite rare. Here some of the second home site mixture can be seen at Lake Redstone, in northwestern Wisconsin near LaVale. A development of second homesites around a 4½ mile long lake, the area abounds in flora out of its usual environment, and a landscape with rock outcroppings and sloping shores next to each other.

A Branigar innovation to give buyers a panoramic view of the remaining section of land at Lake Redstone is a unique observation deck high atop a 100-foot bluff, next to the visitor's center. Also nearby is a nature trail carved from the rocks and woods along the bluff. A children's zoo is a special surprise for the young ones.

COMMENTING ON the shortage of second-home land, especially lake sites, one old land broker compared them to the forests which people once thought were inexhaustible. He predicted that available land would prove insufficient to meet the tremendous demands of the future.

According to a national survey conducted recently by Practical Builder magazine, an authority in the housing field, one out of every 10 American families is thinking about building or buying a second home. And at least one out of every 600 families will actually buy or build a second home this year. Adding to this prediction, the National League of Inland Savings Associations reports that the second home family is beginning to grow as the second car market did about 15 years ago.

Because second-home buyers are increasing at a rate exceeding the available amount of land, many people are purchasing land as financial investments and counting on the law of supply and demand to take effect.

The price of an average second-home lot today in a developed area starts at about $1,500, Branigar estimated, and goes to $9,000, with some exceptions reaching $12,000, depending on the particular lot's location.

Perhaps the next status symbol may not be the second home but the land itself.

Realtor Tells Best Way To Price, Sell Your Home

HOME BUYER'S GUIDE

A home priced within five per cent of its fair market value is 10 times more likely to be sold as one priced 15 to 20 per cent above that figure, Realtor Rich Port, La Grange, advises in the current bulletin of the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers (NIREB).

The bulletin, "Selling Success Successfully," is one of a series published periodically by NIREB, an affiliate of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Port pointed out that "price is of the utmost importance in the sale of other commodities" and has to be extended to real estate. Owners should realize that "pricing a home properly is a matter of joint concern to both seller and Realtor, since their objectives are inextricably bound."

HOW DOES an owner determine the fair market value of his home? As a rule, Port continued, the average home owner can't.

Realtors are trained in evaluation techniques, Port explained. No other talent, skill, or ability more tellingly defines a broker's worth than knowledge of property values and the ability to convince both buyer and seller of the correctness of the figures.

A seller should be aware of a number of points about establishing a market price. Of primary importance is the fact that an overpriced home will not be sold very fast, and homes which are on the market for a long period are often more difficult to sell, Port advised.

THERE ARE other vital reasons for pricing a home within five per cent of its fair market value:

1. Overpricing reduces the response from advertising.

2. The property fails to compete with other properties on the market.

3. Buyers expect more at a higher price and failing to find all they had hoped for will seldom become interested again even at a reduced price.

4. Many salesmen lose enthusiasm after receiving a number of unfavorable reactions.

5. When a property does not sell after proper exposure to the market for a reasonable period of time, price is usually the problem.

Copies of the bulletin are available at $2.50 each to members of NIREB, and $5 each to non-NIREB members. They may be obtained from the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers, 155 East Superior Street, Chicago 60611.

What to Look for Before You Buy

If you are buying your own home, you must plan to tie up some of your future time with maintenance work. This is normal. But there is no point in buying for yourself a lot of major repair problems. Before you sign that purchase agreement is the time to take one more very close look at the house you are buying.

Even a new house should be carefully examined, since problems are still to develop.

START YOUR inspection in the basement. Check for a damp, musty odor. Dampness is normal in a new house until all the moisture in the fresh concrete has evaporated. In an older house it is the result of a leak, or condensation. If too damp forget about getting much use from the basement.

Examine the foundation inside and out. If made of poured concrete, look for structural cracks. Don't be concerned over hairline cracks, but larger cracks may indicate heavy settling which will damage the rest of the house.

If foundation walls are constructed of block, scrape mortar joints with a knife or nail. If it comes out easily it indicates poor quality mortar.

LOOK AT EXPOSED joints and sills while you are in the basement. If a knife blade enters the wood easily it indicates termite infestation or dry rot.

Joints should be of 2-by-8 or 2-by-10 lumber. If the builder skimped here he may have done so somewhere else, too.

Examine the furnace. Look for rust, cracked insulation. If it has a boiler, look for signs of leaks — rust around fittings is a giveaway.

Look at the plumbing where it is exposed. Water pipes should be of copper or brass. Iron and steel pipes can still be found in old homes. These materials corrode in time.

CHECK THE water heater. Open the door at the base and look for rust or signs of leaking.

When you get upstairs, walk around listening for squeaks and groans and observe if the floors sag. A few squeaks mean nothing, but excessive noise may indicate warped floors, gaps in the flooring and insufficient bracing.

Examine the walls. If the house is new and dry wall construction has been used, examine carefully to see that the joints do not show.

IN AN OLDER home, look for cracks in ceilings and walls. Hairline cracks can be taken care of when painting. Large cracks may mean structural trouble.

Examine walls for water stains, especially outside walls. These indicate leaks from the roof or through the siding. A stain in the ceiling could be a roof or wall leak or it could be a bad pipe running through the ceiling.

Try windows and doors to see how well they work. Sticking may be due to paint. But if this is not the case and you really have to work at opening the windows, then they may be out of plumb.

Examine the outside. If paint is blistering and peeling it will need scraping and a completely new coat. Blistering may indicate moisture in the walls.

Successful Paint Job Depends on the Weather

Watch the weather before you pick up that paint brush.

Moisture is the public enemy that leads the field in causing most paint failures. Don't start too early in the day if you see a heavy dew on the grass. And the same goes for continuing your painting chores into the twilight hours if you can feel dampness in the air.

IT'S NOT ALWAYS POSSIBLE TO

needed coat of paint, but it's worth listening to the weather reports and trying to out-scheme nature by hitting on a dry windless day.

A previously unknown fact about moisture inside a house causing paint failure has been tested and found true by dependable paint makers. The leading cause of mildew, wood rot, and paint failure has been found to be due to the following combination:

IN AREAS where extremely hot summers are succeeded by cold winters, the house is practically airtight because of snug weather stripping, causing inadequate ventilation, the interior atmosphere becomes loaded with moisture. This is especially true when laundry equipment is used heavily.

Considerable amounts of vapor then pass through the plaster and soak into the woodwork, and when it is cold outside and warm inside, drops of moisture form and cling between the double exterior walls.

With spring warmth on the house exterior, this trapped water starts to vaporize, filters through the outside wall as vapor and rains the paint.

Teaching Johnny To Swim

Flutter Kicking

(Third of a four-part series.)

Only after a child shows confidence and skill in doing the prone float and prone glide, can a parent advance to teaching the "flutter kick" and some basic arm movements, according to Robert Pohl, Red Cross water safety chairman.

To teach a child to "flutter kick," ask the beginner to lay on the ground or pool deck on his stomach, arms stretched out in front, palms down. Instruct him to keep his legs straight together, but not stiff, and to move them up and down in a scissors-like motion at a slow and even rhythm. Pohl said to count out loud and to encourage the child to breathe in a steady rhythm.

The next step is to go into waist-deep water with the child, and to tell him to float on his stomach. Hold his hands and instruct him to kick his legs up and down as he did out of the water.

AFTER PRACTICE, let the beginner try this step on his own. Move about eight or ten feet from the youngster. Tell him the distance is too far for him to reach you with the prone glide, but it can be done if he kicks his feet. Ask him to do the prone glide, and at your command (delay it about four seconds after the child pushes off) to begin kicking. Pohl said the glide and kick should carry him to you; if not, stop forward so he can touch your hands.

Repeat this step, gradually extending the distance until the child can glide and kick for a distance of 15 feet. Now the beginner is ready to learn the basic arm stroke.

To teach this technique, Pohl said to stand next to the beginner on dry ground or the pool deck, and tell him to bend forward. Instruct the youngster to alternately stretch his hands as far as possible, press straight down, and bring them back up alongside his body to a point directly below the shoulders.

LET HIM PRACTICE the arm movements for a while until he seems to have them pretty well coordinated. Next, put him in chest deep water and tell him to practice the stroke while standing, with his hands remaining under water at all times.

Next, tell him to do the arm stroke while walking in the water. Then instruct him to do the prone kick glide and add the arm stroke, keeping his face in the water. Work on this step with the youngster until he can swim at least 10 feet with movements that are unburied and even.

Next week: Combining kick, stroke and breathing.

Many Tollway Changes Planned, Says Bonniwell

BY ELIZABETH ALANNE

Several changes are planned for the Illinois Tollway in the next four to seven years, including additional interchanges.

Donald R. Bonniwell, chairman of the Illinois Tollway Authority, said today.

Tollway Commission, said his projections for traffic studies and engineering for widening and adding lanes to the tollway.

"ON THE Friday before the Fourth of July, the tollway was equivalent to one of America's most massive parking lots," he said. Bonniwell said the traffic studies and engineering for widening and adding lanes to the tollway system. This is planned for the last quarter of 1968.

Other plans include widening of the tollway all the way to Rockford. The tollway is presently being widened from I-55 to I-55/53.

ADDITIONAL interchanges will be added, Bonniwell said, although he did not name the interchanges where these would be constructed.

He indicated the commission is studying the tollway's present population increase and projected population increase in the northwestern suburban area. He said just expenditures of from $35 million to $50 million to complete the entire modernization program.

THE COMMISSION is presently conducting a feasibility study of the construction of an interchange at Arlington Heights. He said studies are supplemented with a study done for the local tollway communities by Carl A. Larson of Arlington Heights, a professor emeritus of the University of Illinois at Chicago.

Bonniwell said "most of the work proposed for the tollway will be done in the southeast end and progress toward Rockford."

Won't Graduate Here, But It's Okay With Her

BY MAXINE TYNA

Laura Hilton will not be graduating with her senior class at Arlington High School next year.

The 17-year-old student will sail Aug. 15 for Germany to study there at an American Field Service exchange student.

HER TRAVELS will begin Saturday, though when she leaves her Arlington Heights home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hilton of 600 Banbury.

On their way to New York, Laura will stop for college entrance interviews at eastern schools. Since she will be away for a year, she must make her college preparation early.

She expects to arrive at her new home in Bodenbach, Germany, Sept. 9. She will attend a German school in Celle, a village about eight miles away.

FOR NEARLY three weeks, Laura has been tutored in the German language by Bruno Gellet, a teacher at Arlington High School.

The two-hour a day crash course was her first introduction to the language. In school she studied French.

But Laura accepts the challenge with a calm that prevails in her attitude toward the trip. This day she started her packing and assembled a year's supply of clothing into the two suitcases AFS allows its students to bring with them. She sewed buttons on a coat, said goodbye to friends on the telephone and planned her college visits.

SHE INTENDS to major in the behavioral sciences when she enters college in 1968.

"The AFS students I met seemed to be enjoying the whole program and I just decided it was a good idea," she said.

She applied through AFS headquarters in New York and was assigned to live with a family similar to hers. Her German parents also have five children and they are interested in music.

LAURA'S FAMILY includes her brothers, John, 14, Carl, 9, and David, 2, and a sister, Sandy, 13. At Arlington High School she was a member of the Harmonette. She also was a member of the student council, class council and listed on the honor roll.

While she is in Germany, AFS will send her to Berlin.

State Suspends, Cancels Licenses Of Area Drivers

Secretary of State Paul Powell has announced the revocation and suspension of driving privileges based on local court convictions and other reports.

The driver's license of Calvin E. Fath, 1337 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights, has been revoked for driving while intoxicated.

Suspended for accumulating three violations were Arlington Heights residents: Edna J. Carosok of 1508 E. Wing; Henry H. Schumacher of 2709 W. Vista Ln.; Joseph A. Boudier of 934 N. Patton; and Leslie J. Stronchi of 1535 N. Pine.

Probationary permits to drive were issued to: Robert J. DIMICK of 800 E. Wauke; Phyllis J. Koer of 205 S. See-Over; Eugene Michalk of 2006 W. Algonquin; and William J. Stiller of 601 Hackberry Ln., all of Mount Prospect; and Charles M. Buehler of 2701 Stewart St., Rolling Meadows.

Man Injured In Accident

Cherry Grove of Barrington was treated at Northwestern Community Hospital for injuries received when his car was involved in an accident Thursday at Rand near Channah.

Blonde Rose Polio said a moving van driven by Robert Wagner of Indianapolis, Ind.,

Laura Hilton of Arlington Heights, tends to some last minute sewing before she departs for Germany as an American Field Service student.

Through the AFS program, the credits she earns in the German school will be applied to her Dist. 214 credit, and she will receive a diploma from Arlington High School.

"I REALLY don't care about not being here for my senior year and not graduating with my class," she said.

"In my three years at Arlington, I loved them. I did everything I wanted to do. I'll miss my friends here, but other than that, I'm ready to go," she said.

Dist. 214 Still Searching For Additional Teachers

A total of 15 teaching positions in High School Dist. 214 remain to be filled for the 1967-68 school year.

Nelson Lowry, director of personnel for the district, said 10 teachers submitted resignations during July.

AT THE CLOSE of the 1966-67 school year, there were 604 teachers employed.

The number is expected to increase to 660 in September if all vacancies can be filled.

Teaching positions remain open in the following departments: audio-visual, business education, English, counseling, industrial education, foreign languages, boys' physical education, social science, science, educationally mentally handicapped, and speech correction.

Positions in the district include: Arlington, Prospect, Winnetka, Wheeling, and Elk Grove high schools.

LOWRY said most of the 15 openings on the staff require teachers with special educator training.

Pipe Lines

When was the last time you went to a major league baseball game? What do you remember about it most? The score? The star players? The booming homers and flashy defensive plays?

Probably none of these things will stick in your memory very long, and as time passes, you'll fall into the traditional trap of recounting the general excitement, the glamor, the hot dogs, the crowd, and so on, even though you remember nothing specifically.

WHICH BRINGS Pipe Lines to today's topic: The Decline and Fall of that Great American Tradition, the Baseball Hot Dog.

Never before in the history of the game has the fan been subjected to such constant waterlogging. If you go to the ball park and try to buy a hot dog, you're confronted with a line of people waiting to be served. And yet, have you tasted one lately?

A hot dog is supposed to be juicy and hot, and the ends are supposed to protrude beyond the ends of a soft, warm bun. The finished product is supposed to be generously topped with mustard and pickle relish and maybe even some onion onions.

BUT TODAY, everything is turned upside down. The bun is cold and hard and sort of stale. There is, of course, a small dollop of mustard, but it's usually all globed at one end of the dog. Pickle relish and onions cost extra.

But there are minor irritations. What's palling is the hot dog bun. For one thing, they're much smaller than the old ones. For another, they cost more. And they're usually only warm, at best—and really hot. Except when they're been baked on one side, of course, which makes them even less palatable.

AND THERE'S pink instead of red. That's not the company's fault, though, because a state law has been enacted which prevents the meat packers from using artificial coloring made of a strike two on what used to be the honest Red Food.

And, instead of being juicy, they're hard and sort of dry. The skin, which should pop a little when you bite into it, makes a crunching noise now. And you get to have a piece of slightly stale bun, which you get to have to drink with it, not too much, of course, but just to wash it down.

IF THE baseball people don't do something soon, people will start going to soccer games and eating pumpkin seeds and salmon sandwiches.

DOCTOR SAYS
Sunburn Possible
W.G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

If you are a sun worshiper, my advice is to build a three-walled temple with an opaque roof and to your worshiping inside it. Those who lie around in the sun for hours develop a sunburn which, like many other drugs, has both pleasant and unpleasant side effects. It is a chemical reaction and working of the skin and in some persons skin cancer.

A skin specialist estimates that 30 per cent of his large practice is devoted to skin damage caused by excessive exposure to sunlight which aggravates such diseases as psoriasis, erythema, pellagra, porphyria and melanitis, especially in persons of light complexion.

THE OLD IDEA that you can get sunburned from a sunbather's shadow. A surface of a lake has been rays are not reflected but penetrate the water. As a result, they are even more sun even when you are completely submerged.

If you do get sunburned, get some relief by applying corn starch to water, a corn starch or baby oil.
